

I am totally against this change to allow businesses to continue to call you 18 months after you have disengaged their services. The No Call list is meant to keep unsolicited phone calls away. There's a reason why folks have discontinued use of a particular vendor, and don't want to be bothered by them for the next 18 months. We already get bombarded with way too much junk mail; but at least, it doesn't interrupt your day/work as phone calls do -- also, waking up children and sleeping adults who work night shifts.
